I SEE THEE STILL.
I see thee still!
Remember, faithful to her trust,
Culls thee in beauty from the dust;
Thou comest in the morning light, Thou'rt with me in the gloomy night;
In dreams I meet thee as of old—Thou'rt with me as my neck unfold,
And thy sweet voice is in my ear;
In every scene to memory dear
I see thee still!
I see thee still!
In every hallowed token round;
This little ring thy finger bound,
This lock of hair thy forehead shaded,
This sliver chain thy waist braided;
These flowers, all withered now, like thee,
I sat and watched thy sad decay;
Here, on this bed, thou hast died;
Here, on this pillow, thou didst die!
Dark hour! once more its woes unfold;
As then I saw thee, pale and cold,
I see thee still!
I see thee still!
Thou art not in the grave confined—
Death cannot claim the immortal mind;
Let earth close o'er its sacred trust,
But goodness dies not in the dust;
Thee, O my sister! 'tis not thee, Beneath the coffin's lid I see;
Thou'rt to a fairer land gone;
There let me hope, my journey done,
To see thee still!

"SAUCY EYES."
She came smiling across the fields,
Her arms laden with hawthorn bloom.
Harold Carleton, as he saw her, thought her the very incarnation of spring, she was so young, so fresh, so full of exuberant vitality. Yet she was only a cottager's daughter, apparently, for her dress, though neat, was cheap. She glanced up at him as she passed, with her great, eloquent eyes, half-sly, half-mischievously.

Harold was fresh from Cambridge, and at eighteen thought himself quite in another sphere, even in point of age, from the rustic of thirteen. He was disposed to be patronizing.

"What's the hurry, little Saucy Eyes?" he said. "Stop and give a fellow a kiss."

"My name isn't Saucy Eyes, and you know it. Gentlemen," and she emphasized the word, "when they speak to me call me Miss Kent."

She had stopped to say this, and she now walked on with head erect, and the air of a born princess.

"Whew!" whistled Harold, "but I've made a mess of it. No cottager's daughter has an accent like that. Who the deuce can she be? A regular little spit-fire, though."

He ventured to ask the landlord about her, at the small inn where he lodged.
He had come to this picturesque, hilly region on a trout-fishing excursion, and knew no one there.

"O, that's the minister's daughter," was the reply. "Had her hands full of hawthorn, you say? Yes, there's plenty of it about here; one of the few places there is. We've miles of hedges. Miss Kate was taking the bloom home to decorate the parlor. She's a rare one for flowers. You should see her decorate the church at Christmas. All the young ladies give way to her in that, though she is but a child as yet."

"If she grows up as pretty as she is now she'll make many a fellow's heart ache," said Harold, philosophically, as he helped himself to another brook-trout; and in five minutes more, so excellent was the dinner, he had forgotten all about the child.

Years passed. Harold had taken his degree and was now studying law, the profession of his father, Hugh Carleton and his grandfather before him. Just before the summer vacation began he had received a letter from home.

"We shall certainly expect you, dear," his mother wrote, "this year, and will take no excuses. It has been two years since you were home, remember.
We have had such an accession, too, to our society. Our new rector is a most excellent man, and has such a charming daughter, a very pretty girl, and so bright, intelligent and high bred."

Now Harold, who had gone the summer before to France and Germany, had thought this year of going to Norway—had almost given his promise, in fact; but at this appeal he wrote back that he would come home and spend the whole vacation at "Inglewood," for that was the name of Hugh Carleton's place.

"Dear mamma, it was so hard on her last year," he said to himself.

The very day that Harold came home the rector went away on a four weeks' visit with his wife, and the last words he said to his daughter, as he got into the carriage, were:

"Good-bye, Katie, and don't forget to go up to Squire Carleton's and ask to have the gardener come to see the garden. The Squire told me to send for him only yesterday. With his aid we can manage to keep the garden very nice."

"I suppose I might as well go at once," said Katie, when the carriage had disappeared. "Dear old papa, I am sorry you and ma have gone; but I'm glad to have lots of fun, with no one but old Nannie to look after me." And her eyes fairly danced with the mischief of eighteen.

Harold Carleton himself was in the garden when Katie came in. He had arrived unexpectedly the night before a week sooner than he had expected.

He was fond of a little amateur gardening at times, and was just now bending over a moss-rose bush, hoe in hand.
His back was toward Kate, and she, supposing him to be the gardener, called out:

"O, Adam—that's your name, I hear—please ask Mr. Carleton if he can spare you for a couple of hours this afternoon. It's Dr. Kent's at the rectory."

Harold glanced mischievously at the pretty face half hidden by the tall lilies, which she had stopped to smell as she was speaking. Here was a chance for some sport. Kate had never, probably, seen the new gardener, who had only come two days before. Why could not he personate the old fellow? It was fortunate for him that he had an old coat on, he thought.

So calling Adam he took the old man into the plot giving him a crown for hush money, and in the afternoon made his appearance at the rectory, and knocking at the back door, asked for orders.

"O, Adam, is it you?" cried Kate, coming forward. "Let me show you your work. I'll put on my garden hat and be out in a minute."

Harold presented rather a curious appearance as he followed Kate down the long walk. His usually elegant attire had been exchanged for a jacket and trousers of coarse jeans, and his dark curling hair was covered by a red wig, similar in color to Adam's fiery locks.
He had assumed the same shuffling gait, also.

"Here is your work, Adam," said Kate, "tie up the roses, and then weed this bed of hyacinths; train this wista-ria, and, if you have any more time, come to me for further orders."

Harold bowed awkwardly, while a mischievous gleam shot from the brown eyes as he proceeded to tie up the wayward roses.

"This is getting interesting," he observed. "I wonder what my next order will be. By George, but Miss Kate quizzes it well! What a perfect little beauty she is! Whew! how hot it is!"

He wiped the perspiration from his heated brow.

"I begin to understand how the original Adam must have felt when commanded to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow. There, the wistaria is tied up.
Faith, mum," he said, as Kate reappear-ed, "I was just comin' to see whatever else there was to be done."

"How nice you've made things look!" cried Katie, as she glanced at the roses and wistaria. "But it's warm work, isn't it? Adam's your name, I believe. I am glad," affably, "to make your acquaintance, Adam."

"Faith, mum, but it is that same as you say," replied Adam, drawing his straw hat further down over his eyes, still more to hide his face.

"Well, Adam, train up this hedge, and then you may go," she answered, and then swept away.

Several days went by. The pretended Adam never failed to be on hand in the afternoon. But in the morning Harold Carleton, in his own proper person had fishing, boating and picnic excursions, most of which Katie attended; for by this time the squire's wife had called, bringing her son, and of course, after that, Katie was included in everything that went on.

Katie, too, learned to like Harold Carleton very much, for no one more genial or whole-souled ever existed. He was generous to a fault, frank and open-hearted as the day, and had outgrown the conceit and coxcombry of his youth.

One morning, when Katie went into the garden unexpectedly, she found Adam fanning himself with his straw hat, which was usually drawn so closely over his eyes, and she caught a quick glance that reminded her of Harold. But it was only for a moment.

He had not seen her, nor did he see her when she quietly seated herself in a vine covered summer-house, and took out some pretty, graceful work with which she soon became quite absorbed.

The long, drowsy afternoon was wearing away. Nothing but the tinkle of the little brook back of the rectory, the sound of the scythe which Adam was wielding, and the murmur of the bees, broke the silence of the place. Suddenly Katie's ear was arrested by a clear, manly voice, singing a bar from a favorite opera, in a rich, ringing tenor.

She started to her feet and looked out. Only last evening she had sung, with Harold Carleton, that very song, and this surely was his voice again. But no one was in sight except Adam, who was industriously hoeing peas. The truth was, Harold, ignorant of Katie's presence, had forgotten himself, but he was now furious at his indiscretion, for he had heard Katie, and knew what called her out.

"Adam, has Mr. Carleton been here," she asked. "I thought I heard him just now."

"No, mum, it's not yet that I didn't see him," said the apparent stolid Irishman.

"I was sure it was his voice," said Katie, looking just a trifle disappointed.

He would cross-examine Katie a little and thus discover her real feeling toward himself. So he asked, carelessly, though his whole heart was in her answer:

"Did you wish to see him, miss? For it's myself as will be after sinding the likes of him to you?"

"No," said Katie, decidedly. "Stop talking and go to work. I am afraid you are getting lazy," and Katie walked off with her most queenly step.

"Whew!" whistled Harold. "She's too bright to be caught in that way.
Thinks Adam will tell on her. Getting lazy, am I? Well, it isn't because I don't work hard enough," with a doleful gaze at his blistered hands, as he set vigorously to work, adding: "Even as Adam, I must win the good opinion of my Eve."

The next afternoon Katie went to call on a friend, and Harold discontentedly watched her departure. It was so pleasant to know that she was in the summer-house or about the grounds that he did not like to have her go away.

He did not notice her return, nor that she came to the arbor soon after. But when he had finished his last order he threw himself down on a mossy seat, and tossing his wig off, began to fanning himself vigorously with his straw hat.

"I can't wear that contorted wig any longer!" he exclaimed. "Its color even is enough to set me on fire. Now this is refreshing. Beppo, you scamp, bring back that wig. What if your mistress should come? Must I chase after that dog this scorching day?"

Beppo, Katie's dog, had run off with the wig, as the reader has conjectured, and on chase being given to him, rushed to the summer-house and laid the wig at his mistress's feet.

"Why, Beppo, what have you there?" she cried. "It looks like the scalp of old Adam. I wonder if—"

And she broke into a fit of ringing laughter as she met the astonished Harold face to face.

"Mr. Carleton!"
"Miss Kate!"
Then, unable to resist it, he also broke into a hearty laugh.

"Oh, so you're not Adam," said Katie, demurely, at last.

"No, but I will be if you'll only be my Eve!" he cried, with a touch of his old boyish impudence. "O, Katie! Miss Kent, darling, I've learned to love you so dearly—say you will. We'll make another paradise where we can be happy together, and I shan't be obliged to work so hard," breaking into laughter as he saw Katie's roguish look, and wiped his dripping forehead.

"Very well," said Katie. "I'll think of it. But you must remember that it was not a woman who made trouble in the garden this time." And she added arch-ly, "But I'll forgive you for deceiving me, if you will forgive me for—"

"For what?" asked Harold, as she hesitated.

"For not letting you know before that I guessed your secret. I knew from the beginning that you were not Adam. That first day when I pretended to be smelling the lilies I had seen you were, at least not a gardener."

"And you let me work all this time?
And it so hot," with a crestfallen look.
"Yes, you deserved it for your trick.
But I am glad you can work and obey orders. You may have to do so some time, you know."

"Every man has, they say, when he falls in love," he retorted.

"Yes," she said, saucily, "and you mustn't hope to be an exception. But there, there, isn't that quite enough?"

"I declare you're as impudent as you were five years ago!"

"Yes, Oh, you've forgotten. Men always do. It's only woman who remember."

"What do you mean?"
Her eyes danced with mischief. She enjoying his perplexity to the full.

"Well, I'll tell you a fairy tale. Once on a time—there, stop now, or I'll never get on—there was a little girl coming across a field with her arms full of hawthorn bloom."

He gave a quick start, Katie went on demurely:

"And she met an impudent young fellow, a collegian, who thought himself a prince, but wasn't. And he called her 'Saucy Eyes,' the conceited—"

"What! You're 'Saucy Eyes,' are you? O, I remember it all. Who'd have thought it? Why it's the jolliest fairy tale I ever heard. Only, then, she wouldn't let me kiss her, and now—"

"Now somebody will get his ears-boxed if he doesn't behave himself. One must draw the line somewhere, and half a hundred, surely—"

"Well since you are so cruel. But when did you first recognize me?"

"The first day I saw you at leisure; the day you called with your mother."

"And," said Harold, reflectively,
"there was always something in your face I thought familiar. Yes, after all, you are 'Saucy Eyes.'"

Hints to Mothers.
When your daughter performs a task in an ill-fashioned manner, always say, "There! I might as well have done it myself in the first place," and then take the work out of her hand and do it yourself. This will encourage the girl not to try to do the thing next time she is set about it.

Never permit your son to have any amusement at home. This will induce him to seek it in places where you will not be annoyed by the noise.

There is no place like home. Impress this truth upon your children by making home as disagreeable and unlike any other place as possible.

Never neglect the lock on the pantry.
Some boys have probably turned out first class housebreakers all on account of this judicious treatment in early childhood.

Never permit your children to contradict. Let them know that that is your peculiar prerogative.

In childing your children's faults, never forget to mention how much better the Jones children behave. This will cause your little ones everlastingly to love the Jones children.

Take frequent occasion to tell your children how much more favored their lot is than yours when you were a girl. It is always pleasant to children to be constantly reminded of their obligations.

Don't let your son indulge in any kind of outdoor games. Keep him to his books. It will make a great man of him some day, if he should happen to live.

Your girls should never be permitted to romp. Let them grow into interesting invalids, by all means.

Be gentle and courteous before company; but if you have a temper, let your children have a taste of it as often as convenient. A mother should never practice deception upon her brood.

Talk slightly of your husband to your boys and girls. This will make them respect their father.

Tell your child he shall not do a thing and then let him tease you into giving your consent. This will teach him what to do on subsequent occasions.

Make promises to your children, and then neglect to keep them. This will lead your children not to place too much reliance upon your word, and shield them from many disappointments.

When your boy gets comfortably seated in the easy-chair, take it from him.
This will induce him to appreciate a good thing when he grows older, and stick to it—a seat in a crowded horse car, for example.

Tell your children they are the worst ever saw, and they will no doubt endeavor to merit your appreciation.

Lady Artists on a Lark in Maine.
Life had quickly settled into regularity. Every morning sketch-books and cassels, paint-boxes and palettes, came out; the girls broke up into groups of two or three, and started out in various ways to work. Not a picturesque spot but had sketchers encamped about it; a dilapidated set of bars, the scorn of cows but the delight of an artist; a pile of rocks in an orchard, the thorn in the flesh to a farmer, who stared open-eyed to find it attractive to somebody; a path through the woods; or a luxuriant group of tall ferns. The neighborhood was an unworked mine of wealth. One could not turn in any direction without seeing a charming spot that she longed to carry away with her, and the only regret of the enthusiastic students was that each one had not two pairs of hands to work with. Dinner brought them all home, and then came criticism, comparison, and much pleasant talk over canvas and paper, ending —in the Larks' Nest—in nailing the studies to the wall, and making ready for the next day's work.

Before long some of the daily needs of girlish humanity become pressing, and a party was made up to visit the "store" of the neighborhood—a barn-like place, with drugs and dress goods, hardware and groceries, all in one room.

"Have you straw hats?" asked the first girl.

The clerk was sorry but they were out of hats.

"What! no hats?" in a chorus from the party who had been seized with an ambition for broad-brim hats.

"I should like some shoe-buttons," began the second.

These, alas! they never kept.

"What! no shoe-buttons?" in one breath again.

"Please show me some ribbons," spoke up the third.

The clerk regretted to say that ribbons were not in stock.

"What! no ribbons?" cried the chorus, in dismay.

"Writing paper, if you please," cried the fourth, sure that she at least could supply her wants.

The clerk was embarrassed. He began to have a horror of the chorus, and hesitated whether he had better slip out of a back door, and let his inquisitors find out for themselves his stock, or whether he had better laugh.
He decided on the latter just in time, for Peggy began:

"I want some rye flour for sunburn."
The man shook his head,

"What! no rye flour?"
Clip had been looking about, and seeing potatoes, a thought struck her.
"I say, girls," she began, in eager whispers, "now we're out here in the woods, and no callers, we might eat—onions!"

"Onions! onions!" whispered one and another. "Delightful! so we will!"

"I love onions," cried Clip; and,
turning to the amused shop-keeper, added, "Please send us up a bushel."

The man laughed, but again he shook his head.

"What! no onions? Oh!" and, thoroughly disgusted with the country store, the party went out in search of another. After that, whenever in their rambles, which extended many miles, around, they came near to a store, they invariably went in and asked for those articles, expressing their surprise in chorus as at first, and always ending with the demand for onions, which, by-the-way, they were never able to get in that land of farms and gardens, though Mrs. Duncan offered to send to Portland for them.

The Sweet By-and-By.
Dr. Bennett says "the story of the origin of the hymn, 'The Sweet By-and-By,' is a short one and soon told. From 1861 to 1871 I resided in Elkhart, Wis., where I kept an apothecary store, and during that period was associated with Joseph P. Webster, a music teacher, in the production of musical works, I composing the words and he the music. Our first production was 'The Signet Ring,' our second 'The Beatitudes,' our third 'The Sunday School Cantata,' and our fourth and last 'The Great Rebellion.' It was in the fall of 1873, when we were at work on 'The Signet Ring,' that we composed 'The Sweet By-and-By.' It was composed for that work, and published first in it. And this was the way we happened to compose it. Webster was an extremely sensitive and melancholy man, and very prone to think that others had slighted him. He was always imagining that some old friend had spoken to him coolly, and then dropping into bottomless despondency about it until some casual meeting afterward dispelled the illusion. After awhile I understood this weakness so well that I knew how to take it, and it gave me no trouble at all. On the contrary, I used to aid him in getting over these spells, generally by putting him to work, which I learned by experience was sure to relieve him. So one day in the fall of 1874—I could give you the day if I had the copyright here—I was standing at my desk in my drug store, writing up my books, when in came Webster looking uncommonly blue. I knew at a glance what ailed him, but said to him pleasantly, 'Webster, what is the matter with you?' 'Ah,' he said, nothing much. 'It will be all right by-and-by.' 'That is so,' I said, 'and what is the reason that wouldn't be a good subject for a song—By-and-by?' With that I snatched up a piece of paper and went to writing, and within fifteen minutes I handed him a paper with these words written on it:

"There's a land that is fairer than day,
And by faith we may see it afar,
And the Father stands over the way To prepare us a dwelling-place there.

"We shall sing on that beautiful shore
The melodious songs of the blest,
And our spirits shall sorrow no more,
Not a sigh for the blessings of rest.

"To our beautiful Father above
We will offer the tribute of praise,
For the glorious gift of His love,
And the blessings that follow our days."

"There, I said, 'write a tune for that.'
Webster looked it over, and then turned to man named Bright in the store, and said,
'Hand me my fiddle over the counter, please.' The fiddle was passed to him, and he went to work at once to make a tune.
And I hardly think it was more than thirty minutes from the time that he came into the store that he came into the store that he and I were singing together the words and music just as you see them here, on the nineteenth page of 'The Signet Ring.' We liked them very much, and were singing our song, off and on, the rest of the day. Toward evening, Uncle John Crosby, as we used to call him, my wife's uncle, came into the store, and we sung it to him. He was deeply affected by it, and when it was ended the spirit of prophecy came over him and he said, 'That piece is immortal.' And he was right."

"Has the song been corrupted any by so many publications?"

"A little. The tune is frequently written now in the key of G, instead of the key of A, which is no improvement. As to the words, I wrote a different repeat for each stanza. The first was 'We shall meet on that beautiful shore,' the second was 'We shall sing on that beautiful shore,' and the third was 'We shall praise on that beautiful shore.' As it is printed now, the first repeat is used for all three stanzas. Then, too, the Methodists have added two whole stanzas to the hymn. I can't repeat them, but I don't like them."

"Were not you and Webster Methodists?"

"No, sir. We were both liberals, but not members of any church. Webster has never been connected with any church, but I had been a Methodist in my youth, and until I was nineteen years old."

"There is a story going around that you and Webster were drunk when you composed that hymn. Is there any truth in it?"

"There is not. Webster was in the habit of drinking, but I know he wasn't drunk the day he composed that tune."

"What has become of Webster?"

SENATOR BAYARD PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

The senate convened in special session on Monday last to elect a president pro tempore. There was a full attendance of both republican and democratic senators and the session was witnessed by a large crowd of people who filled the galleries of the capitol to the utmost capacity.

The desk formerly occupied by Senator Burnside was tastefully draped in black, while several bouquets ornamented the desks of prominent senators. The senators-elect, Aldrich, Lapham and Miller, occupied seats upon the floor on the republican side.

After prayer by Chaplain Bullock the senate was called to order by Mr. Harris and Arthur's proclamation read.

Mr. Pendleton then moved the adoption of the following resolution: That Thomas F. Bayard, a senator from the state of Delaware, is hereby chosen president pro tem. of the senate.

This resolution was, after the reading of the credentials of the senators elect, adopted by a vote of 31 to 32. Mr. Davis, of Illinois, did not vote. Mr. Mahone voted with the republicans. The chair then appointed Senators Anthony and Pendleton to escort the president pro tempore elect—Mr. Bayard—to the chair.

The wrong which President Arthur committed by not retiring from the senate when he was elected Vice President and therefore hindering the senate to provide a presidential successor, is thus repaired and one of the most enlightened and patriotic statesman of the Democratic party now fills that important office. Senator Bayard, we are proud to say, commands in every position from President down, the highest trust of the Republic.

Gen. Bailey, the Republican candidate for State Treasurer, has been three times defeated for office. His coming defeat in November will be the fourth.

Ohio Election.

At the recent election in Ohio the republicans re-elected Gov. Foster by a majority of about 8000. This shows a reduction of about 27,000 since the Presidential election, while the Democrats have large gains in the legislature.

The Pittsburg Dispatch is in favor of Attorney General MacVeagh for the next Governor of Pennsylvania. All right—no objections whatever except that we much prefer Major King, of Philadelphia.

The Democrats of Massachusetts met in convention at Worcester on the 5th inst., and nominated Hon. Charles F. Thompson, of Gloucester, for Governor, and James H. Carlton, of Haverhill, for Lieutenant Governor.

DANIEL C. KEELE, the Democratic nominee for County Treasurer, is a thoroughly honest man, has good qualifications for the office, and is eminently courteous and social in his intercourse with his fellow men. He has followed the business of a cattle dealer these many years and is perhaps better known, especially among farmers, than any other candidate on the ticket. Wherever he has been either on business or otherwise, he is always welcome to call again. Daniel made his nomination without the help of any ring or combination, purely on personal worth and merit. Locality was strongly against him, for it is a potent fact that Potter township for many years has the lion's share of county offices. If he runs as well in other parts of the county as he will in the valleys, he will have a majority that any man may well be proud of.

Wolfe Speaks at Titusville.

TITUSVILLE, October 9.—Mr. Wolfe addressed a very large audience, composed of the most influential men in the vicinity, at the Marshall opera house last evening. His speech consisted in a vigorous arraignment of the bosses. He created a great sensation, and was received with hearty applause throughout. Mr. Wolfe remained over to-day as the guest of ex-Mayor Bates. On Tuesday he speaks at Wilkesbarre.

HON. C. S. WOLFE opened his aggressive campaign for state treasurer, in Philadelphia on the 4 inst., by a flaming speech. He showed up in an able and incovertible manner the beauties of republican machine rule in Pennsylvania in all its wickedness, and particularly how the Camerons and their lieutenants have for years ruled the Republican party with an iron rod, without the slightest regard to the wishes of the great mass of the voters or the good of the people at large. The meeting was held under the auspices of the National Republican League, and was very largely attended and enthusiastic. Dr. Thomas P. Morton presided and the large number of vice-presidents were among the best and most influential Republicans in the city. The independent movement is gaining strength every day. Mr. Wolfe is making it hot for the bosses, and if he succeeds, as there is good reason to believe he will, to inaugurate a movement that will disenfranchise his party in Pennsylvania from the object political slavery under which it has groined for years, he will have accomplished a great and good work.

A TRUE BILL.

Guiteau Indicted in Eleven Minutes Drawn Courts.

WASHINGTON, October 9.—The indictment against Charles J. Guiteau, for the murder of James A. Garfield, late president of the United States, was presented to the grand jury yesterday morning. The indictment embraces eleven counts and is drawn with great minuteness. Each count repeats the charge that Guiteau, feloniously and wilfully and of his malice aforethought did kill and murder against the form of the statute in such case made and provided and against the peace and government of the United States. The variations are regarding the time and place of death and the court's jurisdiction, and are drawn so as to cover every possible loop-hole through which the prisoner might escape. For instance, the only variation in the fifth count is a change in the order of mention of the places in which death is said to have occurred, the county of Washington and District of Columbia being put first. The sixth count recites that the offense charged committed in the Baltimore and Potomac railroad depot, in the city of Washington, which building at the time stood on the ground belonging to and under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. The ninth count is varied by the introduction of the recital that the district in which the offense charged was committed constitutes a judicial circuit of the United States, and that the county of Monmouth and state of New Jersey, where the said James A. Garfield died, form part of a judicial circuit of the United States consisting of the District of Columbia. In all other respects this count is like the third.

At 12.45 the grand jury entered the criminal court room and presented the indictment against Guiteau, indorsed "a true bill," and signed by Caleb Churchman, foreman.

Mr. Fury Declines.

The following open letter to the chairman of the late Greenback County Convention shows just what we had before expected, namely that our friend Joe declines the doubtful and empty honor of a candidacy on the Greenback county ticket. While Mr. Fury fully deserves a substantial recognition at the hands of his party, he does not feel sour, growl and grumble because the other chap received more votes and was nominated. His manly and honorable bearing challenges the admiration of his friends and the consideration of the entire party:

BELLEFONTE, Oct. 1, 1881.

JACOB V. THOMAS, Esq., Chairman National Greenback County Committee:

My Dear Sir—On the 13th of September the National Greenback County Convention did me the honor to put my name on its ticket as a candidate for legislator of Centre county.

Permit me to say that while I appreciate the compliment and thank my Greenback friends for their mark of their confidence and esteem, I am in honor bound to decline the nomination.

Having submitted my name to the Democratic Convention and pledged myself to abide by its decision, it would not be honorable in me to turn my guns against my party friends simply because they chose another in preference to myself.

While I am a Greenbacker in theory and believe that to be the proper financial doctrine, I have all my life been a Democrat in principle and have acted with that party. It would look badly now, simply because I was defeated in convention for an office hardly worth contending for, to repudiate the sentiment and principle which I have always cherished and which I thoroughly believe to be the best hope of the people of this country.

The guerrilla in politics is not a creature to be admired. What else would I be should I accept a nomination tendered me under such circumstances?

At the same time I desire to say that I fully appreciate the respect shown me by my friends of the Greenback party.

Very truly, your friend,

JOE W. FURY.

A SAMPLE CARPET BAGGER.

NEW YORK, October 8th.—Franklin J. Moses, formerly governor of South Carolina, was arrested and locked up at police headquarters on a charge of swindling William S. Hall, a retired hotel keeper, who lives at No. 4 East Tenth street. Hall was swindled out of $2,500 in June last, by Plin White, the notorious confidence man. White was arrested on June 12. Two days later Moses called on him and after introducing himself as a lawyer by the name of Hessons, offered to give Hall information by which the money could be recovered. He said that White and wife banded with his mother and had in her trunk diamonds and other property worth the amount got from Hall. If Hall would give him twenty-five dollars, he said, he would procure a search warrant and get the property belonging to White and wife. Hall gave him twenty-five dollars and Moses went away never to return. White was afterward convicted and sent to prison for five years. To-day Mrs. Hall saw Moses on One Hundred and Tenth street and informed Inspector Byrnes. He was arrested this evening at No. 85 West Eleventh street. At police headquarters Moses expressed a desire to settle the matter by paying Hall twenty-five dollars, but both Mr. and Mrs. Hall said they were determined to prosecute.

How Republican Candidates are Nominated.

The statement attributed to Gov. Hoyt that Gen. Bailey was not brought out by Senator Cameron is known to be untrue. The Pittsburg Post says, on good authority we have this statement: Some weeks ago Senator Cameron wrote to Gen. Bailey to go to Harrisburg that he wanted to see him. Gen. Bailey promptly responded to the summons, when Cameron told him he wanted him to run for State Treasurer, and that he would see to it that he should be nominated. From that time on Bailey was a candidate. Before that time nobody ever dreamed of him as a candidate for State Treasurer, not even myself.

An Emphatic Denial.

To the Editor of THE TIMES:

In a recent issue of your paper an article appeared describing the operations of the graveyard insurance system at Hawley and intimating that one Barney Reilly, of Scranton, was interested in that infamous traffic. As many friends here and elsewhere thought the reference alluded to me I ask that in accordance with your well-known sense to fair play you will permit me to say that I have never been, am not and never intend to be interested either directly or indirectly in such a damnable business the aim of which is to destroy all respect for old age, all love for the venerable and the tenderest filial affection which God has planted in the human heart and enjoined in the express command, "Honor thy father and thy mother." I would suffer my right hand to rot before I would carry a graveyard insurance policy on the life of any man or woman. The Times is doing a noble work in exposing the vile traffic and its course has my heartiest approval.

Yours respectfully,

BERNARD D. O'REILLY.

ELECTIONS are to be held in ten States this Fall—Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Ohio, Mississippi, and Wisconsin. Only in Massachusetts, Ohio and Virginia are Governors and Legislators to be elected. Pennsylvania elects county officers and State Treasurer. New York, in addition to a partial board of State officers, Assembly and Senate, elects four Representatives to Congress in place of Fernando Wood, deceased, Levi P. Morton, appointed Minister to France, and Warner Miller and Elbridge Lapham, elected to the Senate. In Minnesota, Mississippi and Virginia the Legislatures elected will choose United States Senators.

A Hard Fight Ahead.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Republicans of Pennsylvania have a hard fight ahead of them to defeat Wolfe, the Independent candidate for State Treasurer, and it is altogether possible they will be forced to call on the United States treasury for aid and comfort to accomplish it. The republican bosses of Pennsylvania realize that the election of Wolfe means the opening up of the books, and this would be a calamity, to prevent which each one of them would undertake to drink up Evil or eat a crocodile.

TRUSTEES' SALE.—Will be sold at public sale at the late residence of Elizabeth Holloway, deceased, Aaronsburg, Pa., on Saturday, October 15th, 1881, the following described real estate in said town, bounded on the east by lot of John J. Frank, on the south by Strawberry valley, on the west by land of J. J. H. Wyle and on the north by Elm street. Thereon erected a two-story dwelling house, stable and other outbuildings.

Terms: One-half of purchase money on day of sale and the balance in one year with interest, to be secured by bond and mortgage. Sale to begin at one o'clock, and if not sold the property will be publicly rented for one year.

JACOB HOLLOWAY, Trustee.

EXECUTORS' PRIVATE SALE.—The substantial Phillips, late of Millheim, deceased, offer at private sale until October 15th, 1881, a SPLENDID FARM, situate two miles west of Millheim on the turnpike, and about four miles from Harrisburg, on the Lewisburg & Tyrone rail road, now occupied by Henry Frankenberg, containing acres, and the perfect, about 50 of which are cleared and in a good state of cultivation. The balance is well timbered. The improvements are a good brick dwelling house, bank barn and all other necessary outbuildings. A fine young apple orchard in good bearing condition, and variety of other fruit trees, as well as never failing water, also on the premises. It is together with the most desirable small farms in Penn's Valley. For particulars apply to

PANORA, IOWA, Oct. 2nd 1881
MR. EDITOR: Since my last letter of July 11th, 1881 up to the 28th of August we had no rain out here, but a heat, that some days reached 108 degrees in the shade. Streams and wells got dry, vegetables, corn, wheat and oats burned up and the poorest harvest we had for many years followed. We have hardly any potatoes and pay from $1.50 to $2.00 per bushel.

On the 28th of August the weather changed, it commenced to rain and rained for almost three weeks, accompanied by high and cold winds, and the 18th of September brought a heavy snow storm, which lasted that day and part of the night. After that heat, thunder storms and cold rains followed alternately, so that we had to change our clothing nearly every day. On the 29th ult., we were visited by a severe thunder storm, which did much damage in our neighborhood, while we got through with the fright and some leveled fences. Three miles west of us not a building was spared, all being damaged more or less and some destroyed altogether. The life of two women are despaired of, many are wounded.

It was a hard summer for us, our work and toiling seems to have been almost in vain, for we barely have enough to live through the winter. But we will not grumble, but think of the poor sufferers in Michigan, whose misfortunes fill our hearts with sorrow and sympathy. Who knows, what the near future may have in store for us?

My letter grew longer than I had intended it to be, so I will close, hoping to be able to report more favorable things the next time.

Yours truly,
HERMAN WITTHAUER

HAIR'S VEGETABLE SCALP RESTORER is a scientific combination of some of the most powerful restorative agents in the vegetable kingdom. It restores gray hair to its original color. It makes the scalp white and clean. It cures dandruff and humors, and falling out of the hair. It facilitates the nutritive principle by which the hair is nourished and supplied. It makes the hair moist, soft and glossy, and is unsurpassed as a hair dressing. It is the most complete and perfect preparation ever offered to the public, as its effects remain a long time, making only an occasional application necessary. It is recommended and used by eminent medical men, and officially endorsed by the State Assayer of Massachusetts. The popularity of Hair's Hair Restorer has increased with the test of many years, both in this country and in foreign lands, and it is now known and used in all the civilized countries of the world.

News Miscellany.

SPECULATIVE INSURANCE.—Stephen Andrews, near Hughesville, Lycoming county, died yesterday, aged 84 years. He was plastered with speculative insurance to the extent of $80,000. Hughesville parties carried $10,000 of this amount.

Dr. W. W. Farrel, of Dillsburg, York county, has been arrested under the new State law requiring all physicians to register at the Prothonotary's office.

Queen Victoria was very poor until she ascended the British throne; now the private fortune of the queen amounts to $80,000,000, and she possesses an annual income of $3,250,000.

The War Department has received information from General Hancock that he will detail a special court-martial to try Sergeant Mason, who attempted to shoot Guitierrez.

While being driven at full speed and in opposite directions around the race course at the Lehigh county fair at Allentown, two fast horses collided, instantly killing both. One was valued at $500, the other at $5,000.

It is mentioned in a singular coincidence that John Sherman was making a partisan speech sixteen years ago when the news came that Lincoln was assassinated, and he was doing the same thing the Monday night when word came that Garfield was dead.

Ex-Governor Moses, once a carpet bag Governor of South Carolina, is under arrest in New York, charged with swindling, and obtained money under false pretences.

Warning to Young Girls.

Sadie Owens and Jeanette Duncan, two Mercer county girls, took arsenic to beautify their complexions. Sadie died after the second dose, but Jeanette, taking only one dose, was finally, after much trouble, saved.

A Terrible Plague.

NEW YORK, October 7.—A special from Kansas City, Mo., says a terrible plague has broken out near Waldron, Platte county. Eleven persons have died in five days, and none of the victims affected give signs of recovery. The bodies of the sufferers are covered with black eruptions. After death the flesh falls from their bones, so that the bodies cannot be lifted into the coffins without falling to pieces.

PROBABLE MURDER.

LOCK HAVEN, October 9.—A mysterious death occurred here at 10:30 o'clock last night. Jonas Zindle is the proprietor of the Farmers' hotel on church street. Samuel Blier, who was under the influence of liquor, had been quarreling in the bar-room and Zindle walked him outside. Instantly there was a heavy thud heard on the pavement. Zindle's wife ran out and found her husband lying in the street. Blier was on his hands and knees, but got up and ran off. Mrs. Zindle called for help, and it was then found that Zindle was dead, the right side of his face being terribly bruised. Blier was arrested at his home at midnight. An inquest commenced to-day but was adjourned until to-morrow.

MARRIED.

On the 21st ult., in the Lutheran church at Belleville, Mill Co. Pa., by Rev. J. M. Steck, Dr. J. Jordan Deshler, of Aaronsburg, to Miss Elsie E. Hemphill, of Belleville.

On the 22nd ult., by Rev. Wm. H. Groh, Mr. Jacob Reish, to Miss Lizzie Homan, both of Ferguson township.

DIED.

On the 7th ult., at Centre Hall, Hannah A. wife of J. M. Sweeney, aged 20 years, 6 months and 20 days.

On the 23rd ult., in Potter township, Henrietta, wife of Adam C. Ripka, aged 28 years, 6 months and 14 days.

On the 24th ult., in Lock Haven, Mr. J. J. Everett, aged 41 years and 11 days.

Mr. Everett was the sole proprietor of the well-known "See Hick" one of the best dry goods stores in Central Pennsylvania. He was an active and progressive business man, a most useful citizen and a devoted christian. In all matters concerning the public good he took a leading part. In the several departments of church work he manifested a true industry. His contributions to benevolent objects were frequent and liberal. He was a prominent member of the M. E. Church, and by a holy life and conduct. In all the walks of life he was a man of honor and strict integrity and leaves behind him a noble and blessed example. His family has lost a kind husband and tender father, his congregation one of its main pillars and Lock Haven one of her best citizens.

1881. MIDSUMMER. 1881
H. R. WHITCOMB,
LOCK HAVEN, PA.

Takes this method to announce to the people of Penns. Brush and Sugar Valleys that after a highly successful season he still has,

25,000 WORTH OF CLOTHING, to select from, and in order to reduce this large stock quickly he has reduced his prices from 10 to 50 per cent.

We have revolutionized the Clothing business in Lock Haven. can get as good a suit from us as any tailor can make, and at less than half the price; and for style and fit they are often superior. Boys like stylish suits, as well as men, and we have them in all grades.

Boys Clothing is a Specialty With Us.

No use looking for better goods for boys than we have— you can't find them. No living man shall be allowed to give; their customers better value for their money than can always be found at my store. And where is the mother that likes to make children's clothes? Can't make them fit. "Never look well", is the complaint of every one. We've got all grades and they are just cute and nobly as they can be. A change of weather means a change of clothes; a change of clothes requires a change of patterns and styles of materials. The house that has the choicest and newest changes in styles and patterns is likely to secure the greatest number of new customers and best please and retain its old patrons. In these days it is not everything that looks like clothing that will sell, but in the keen competition between different houses it will be the survival of the fittest.

OUR CLOTHING IS
